Worship Plans for 5/21

Theme: Ascension Sunday

Reverend Ruth will be offering baptism & taking in the confirmands as new members

Focus Scripture (John 17:1-8)

When Creator Sets Free (Jesus) was finished speaking to his followers, he lifted his eyes to the spirit-world above and sent his voice to the Great Spirit.

“O Great Father,” he prayed, “it is time for you to bring honor to your Son, so he may bring honor to you. You have put all human beings under the care of your Son, so he can give them the life of the world to come that never fades away, full of beauty and harmony. This life comes from knowing you, the only true and Great Spirit, and from knowing the Chosen One, Creator Sets Free (Jesus), the one you have sent into this world.

“I have brought you honor on earth by finishing the work you sent me to do. It is now time, Great Spirit, for you to honor me with the beauty I shared at your side before you created all things.

“I have shown who you truly are to the ones you gave me from this world. They were always yours and you trusted me with them, and they have walked in your ways. They now know that everything I have comes from you. The message you gave to me I have given to them. They have welcomed the truth about who I am and trust that you sent me.

Baptism is grounded in the life, death, and resurrection of Jesus Christ; the grace which baptism makes available is that of the atonement of Christ which makes possible our reconciliation with God. Baptism involves dying to sin, newness of life, union with Christ, receiving the Holy Spirit, and incorporation into Christ's church.

Last Week's Sermon 5/14

Theme for the day: Knowing God

Sermon: “At Home in God”

Focus Scripture: (Acts 17:22-31)

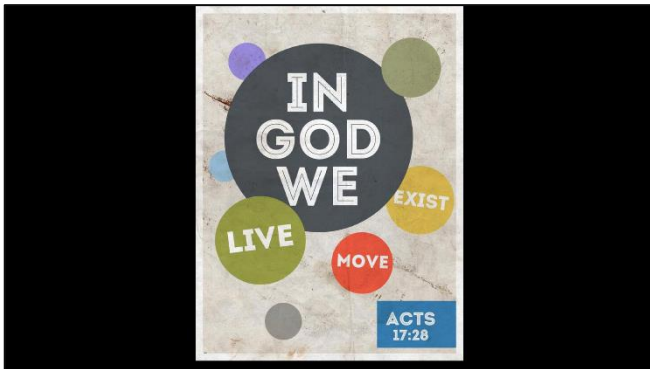

Last week we heard a passage from the Acts of the Apostles describing the stoning of St Stephen. You might remember that a young man named Saul held the coats of those who were committing that heinous hate crime. I mentioned then that this young man would become important to the story of Christianity. Today, we once again hear from the Acts of the Apostles, however it will be our focus scripture, rather than passing it by quickly. Once again Saul will appear in the passage, but today he has a new name. You see, Saul met the risen Christ and it changed his life! It changed his life so much that Saul was transformed into Paul.

Today we find Paul in Athens, sometime before Greek Orthodox Christianity became the dominant religion there. As he wanders around the city, he finds evidence of religious devotion everywhere; devotion to all kinds of different gods and all kinds of different faiths. He concludes that the people of Athens are a religiously minded people. As if to confirm that impression, he is invited to meet with the Areopagus, a council of the most respected and distinguished thinkers in the city, and to explain to them what his faith is all about.

Paul begins by affirming the Athenians for their keen interest in religion. He quotes approvingly from two of their own respected poets. And far from telling them that their religions are all rubbish, he links his message directly to things he has observed in their own religious practice. He had found a shrine in the city dedicated to “the unknown god”, and so he begins by suggesting that the faith he is there to preach is not something strange and new, but rather it is the missing knowledge of a faith that is already within their experience.

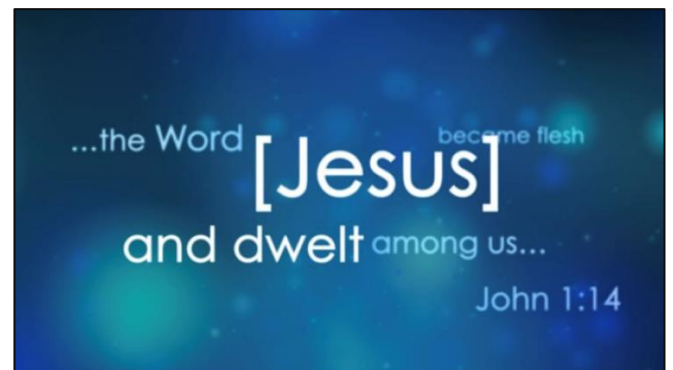

Now that raises a question. Is this just a slick bit of marketing on Paul's part? Or is he actually speaking with integrity about some deep truths concerning the nature of God? Well, although I think the advertising industry would have been proud of the angle he took, I think we have to conclude that he meant what he said. The quote he uses from the Greek poet Epim`enides is particularly instructive. “In God we live and move and have our being.” In using that quote, Paul is saying that no one, regardless of what they might or might not believe, is entirely cut off from God and removed from the influence of God. To live, to move, to be; all is surrounded by God and underpinned by God. A person's ability to walk across the room is as dependent on God as it is dependent on the oxygen that they breathe. Indeed Paul specifically says that although God wants to be sought out by us, God is not far from anyone and is within reach of everyone.

This does, I think, track with what we heard Jesus say in the gospel reading last week when he made the rather exclusive sounding statement that the world cannot receive the Holy Spirit, because it neither sees or knows the Spirit, but that the disciples can and do.

It seems that both are saying that there is something confronting about the gospel made known in Christ, something that demands a tough choice, something that does not simply allow people to add a bit of Christian faith to their lives and leave everything else unchanged. The demands of Christian discipleship will not be domesticated to fit “the world”. There comes a point in understanding when you are forced to choose one or the other. You can't have both.

So in Paul's speech, we find what looks like a mix of affirmation of other people's religious faith and a challenge to go beyond it and find something more.

Paul's speech is clearly asserting that there are people who do not know anything about Christ who are nevertheless reaching out for God and responding to God. And he also clearly implies that we cannot, so to speak, “take” Christ to them, because Christ is already among them. In God they live and move and have their being. This should come as no great surprise to us. We believe in a God who takes the initiative and comes to us while we are still set on our own ways and unwilling to change. We believe in a God who takes flesh among us, who embodied himself in places where he may not be welcomed. We believe in a God who is present in ordinary things, in bread and wine and water, reaching out to us and asking us to offer ourselves in return. So it should be no great surprise to us that this God who is not far from anyone is present among people of other faiths, reaching out to them in the ordinary things around them. And so we would be horribly out of line if we were to barge in and begin denouncing other faiths and asserting the claims of our own without listening first and learning what Christ has been doing among them.

To me, there seems no obvious reason why people who are genuinely seeking God might not discern enough of God’s response to turn their lives around and entrust themselves to God and so be accepted as God’s people. I don’t think the Bible either tells us that or rules it out. But what I am sure is that all of us – those who know the story of Christ and those who don’t – will come closer to the truth and to understanding what God is calling us to as we listen to one another and allow one another’s stories of grace to reveal God to us and challenge us to offer ourselves more fully into the hands of God. We have much to learn and much to offer.

For us it begins here, encountering the risen Christ in the word spoken and the bread broken, and as we do we learn to recognize him in places ever more strange and foreign. Henri Nouwen said that “when we have met our Lord in the silent intimacy of our prayer, then we will also meet him in the camp, in the market, and in the town square. But when we have not met him in the center of our own hearts, we cannot expect to meet him in the busyness of our daily lives.” So as we encounter the Christ here, let us go out ready to acknowledge and celebrate the Christ wherever and in whoever we encounter him, and to allow that recognition to call us and others to offer ourselves, ever more fully and consciously, into the hands of God.

Amen.

"It is hard to find words in the language of me to explain the deep things of God. Indeed, there are none that will adequately express what the children of God experience. ## Letter from DS Karen

Sage District

Oregon-Idaho Conference

The Reverend Karen
Hernandez, District
Superintendent The United Methodist Church Etha
Carruthers, District
Administrator

May 14, 2023

Dear members and friends of Trinity United Methodist Church,

I am writing to share with you that Bishop Cedrick Bridgeforth and the Greater Northwest Area Cabinet have long prayed about and worked on an interim appointment plan for your congregation. As a result, we have a one-year plan with the goal of discerning what God is calling United Methodists in Idaho Falls to do and be in the future. Beginning July 1, 2023, the following leadership will be journeying with you in ministry:

First. Rev. Kathy Neary, ordained elder from the Pacific Northwest Conference, will be with you on a part-time basis. Pastor Kathy is a trained and experienced interim minister who will lead you in worship the first two Sundays of each month, offer a weekly discipleship group, work with your leadership, and join you in the ministry of pastoral care for the year ahead.

Second, Genesis Christian Mediation will also be with you to listen, teach, train, and discern. Andrew Arthur and Rev. Brian Shimer's work alongside Pastor Kathy will make for superb team! Genesis has a track record of success with an ever-growing number of Sage congregations, and I am grateful to know that their gifted leadership will be put to use among you.

Third, a different member of the Greater Northwest Area Cabinet will be with you each month to preach and offer additional training resources. This is unprecedented in the Area!

Because of your resources, your potential, and you being you, the Bishop has asked the Cabinet to invest in you on a monthly basis. You can expect Bishop Cedrick to be your preacher once in the coming year – and you should expect to be richly blessed by his faith and wisdom!

In order to have these three kinds of leadership available to you, all three will all be shared with the St. Paul's UMC congregation. Your worship time will change, but you will continue having worship for your congregation in your building. Many details are yet to be determined. While this complex plan likely seems challenging, I am absolutely certain that you are in for an incredible year of learning, growth, and discernment.

Because this is a lot to take in, you are invited to a time of conversation immediately following worship today. Leaders who met with me to discuss this plan will facilitate this conversation and help to clarify this news. Your SPRC members will convey to me your questions and concerns so that Pastor Kathy, Andrew, Brian and I can give them our time and careful consideration.

You have been praying for your next pastor. The Cabinet has prayed dozens of times, and I have prayed many hours for your church and this appointment. God has answered all of those prayers with a surprising plan that includes an abundance of extraordinary leaders!! Don't stop now though! Instead, please be in prayer for Andrew, Brian, Pastor Kathy, Bishop Cedrick, the Greater Northwest Area Cabinet, the St. Paul's congregation, and for your church family. Pray that the Spirit moves in a mighty way and that we are all courageous enough to follow! Know that all of these leaders are also praying for you.

May God's grace carry you in the weeks ahead as you thank Pastor Ruth for her wonderful care, her joy, her service over these past nine years. May the hope of the Risen Christ lead you into the possibilities that await you!

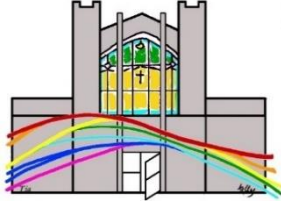

With the peace of Christ,

Rev. Karen

Thank you, ladies!

Bev Kemp talked to us about FISH and the school backpack program. They are already getting supplies gathered for the coming school year. Kay read a short story about an early Methodist women's group. They were brave women.

Remember there will not be unit meetings in June or July. Our next get-together will be in August for the ice cream social. Keep in touch with Mary if you are planning on attending Mission U at Trinity in July.

Have a safe and fun summer.

Stained-Glass Window Repair

The project to procure replacement-stained glass for our windows has hit a snag. In the last status meeting, we were informed by Nzilani Glass Conservation that the vendor that was lined up to provide our replacement glass was experiencing challenges. The machine that rolls out the “Cats Paw” texture on the stained glass had a chipped gear. Each time the missing tooth came around it made a wave in the glass. In addition, they needed to take a break during the summer months to replace the roof of their building. We are waiting until mid-July to check on the progress of the repairs on the roller tooth and the roof.

This is not a showstopper for our restoration project. Plan “B” includes repairing rather than replacing existing pieces of glass and a nationwide search for matching replacement-stained glass pieces. Plan “B” is very much like the process we used for the first two windows.

Rigby Handbells at Trinity

The Rigby High School handbell choir, under the direction of Corbin Rasmussen, will present a bell concert at Trinity on Sunday May 28th at 4pm.

There is a strong connection between Trinity and the Rigby Bell Choir. Corbin was the latest director of the Trinity Bell Choir and gave the Rigby students an opportunity to play within the Trinity Bell concerts. Trinity has supported the Rigby Bell Choir by loaning them extra bells for their regional competitions.

Please come and hear the Rigby Highschool Bell Choir in their “Thank You” concert at Trinity.
