Worship on 5/15

Although we like to think that we are special in God's plan and love, scriptures like this one from Acts are a reminder that God loves all people.

Theme for the day:
 God Declares New Life to EVERYONE
 Sermon Title "Let's Eat"
 (Acts 11:1-18)

By the time Peter and his friends from Joppa returned to Jerusalem, news about outsiders accepting God's message had already spread to the Lord's emissaries and believers there. Some of the circumcised believers didn't welcome Peter with joy, but with criticism.

Why did you violate divine law by associating with outsiders and sitting at the table with them for a meal? This is an outrage! Peter patiently told them what had happened, laying out in detail the whole story.

I was in Joppa, I was praying, and I fell into a trance. In my vision, something like a huge sheet descended from the sky as if it were being lowered by its four corners. It landed right in front of me. It was full of all kinds of four-footed creatures that we would call unclean—I could identify mammals, snakes, lizards, and birds. Then I heard a voice say, "Get up, Peter! Kill these creatures and eat them!" Of course, I replied, "No way, Lord! Not a single bite of forbidden, non-kosher food has ever touched my lips." But then the voice spoke from heaven a second time: "If God makes something clean, you must not call it dirty or forbidden." This whole drama was repeated three times, and then it was all pulled back up into the sky.

At that very second, three men arrived at the house where I was staying. They had come to me from Caesarea. The Holy Spirit told me I should go with them, that I shouldn't make any distinction between them as Gentiles and us as Jews. These six brothers from Joppa came with me; and yes, we entered the man's home even though he was an outsider.

The outsider told us the story of how he had seen a heavenly messenger standing in his house who said, "Send to Joppa and bring back Simon, also called Peter, and he will give you a message that will rescue both you and your household." Then I began to speak; and as I did, the Holy Spirit fell upon them—it was exactly as it had been with us at the beginning. Then I remembered what Jesus had said to us: "John ritually cleansed people with water through baptism, but you will be washed with the Holy Spirit." So, if God gave them the same gift we were given when we believed in the Lord Jesus, the Anointed One, who was I to stand in God's way?

There was no argument, only silence.

Well then, we must conclude that God has given to the outsiders the opportunity to rethink their lives, turn to God, and gain a new life.

John Wesley Quote

This is part two of a two part quote from Wesley. Thanks for staying tuned in for the continuation of our Wesley Quote.

The first evening about twelve persons came; the next week thirty or forty. When they were increased to about a hundred, I took down their names and places of abode, intending, as often as it was convenient, to call upon them at their own houses. Thus, without any previous plan or design, began the Methodist Society in England.

Global Ministries/UMCOR

This fund will provide direct assistance to those in Ukraine as well as assistance to Ukrainians fleeing to neighboring countries.

Gifts to support the people of Ukraine can be made in the following ways:

Check to Trinity UMC with "UMCOR # 982450-Ukraine" written on the memo line. We will get it to them.

Sermon from 5/8

"Get Up!"

(Based on Acts 9:36-43)

I had planned on preaching about the good works of Tabitha this morning, and how we can use her as a model to keep our hands busy for the Lord. There was even going to be a nice tie-in with the gospel lesson about how when Jesus' sheep respond to the Lord's voice and follow him into the fullness of life— like Tabitha's dead body responded to Peter's command to stand up and return to life. The sermon was going to draw a comparison between Tabitha's story of resurrection, and that of Jairus daughter being raised from the dead. Both are beautiful stories of how our God values women's lives outside of their capacity to reproduce.

But the Holy Spirit is leading me to share another message for Mother's Day. Now me, personally, I love Mother's Day. It gives me an opportunity to reflect on the wonderful, strong, brave, caring, women in my life who helped mold me into who I am. But my story and my feelings are not every woman's story or feelings. You see, my Facebook feed is filled with pleas not to preach about Mother's Day; not to recognize the modern American version of this holiday began in the United States in the early 20th century at the initiative of Anna Jarvis, who organized the first Mother's Day service of worship and celebration at Andrews Methodist Episcopal Church. Jarvis herself regretted how commercial the day eventually became.

It seems ironic to me that a day I associate with the wise women in my life, falls so close to a week, when a leaked draft majority opinion from the supreme court suggests that we are on the brink of taking away a woman's right to choose whether she will bear a child or not; I am saddened, no, horrified. Please, let me make it 100% clear, if a woman is in a position to bear and provide for a child, she will... but she should have the autonomy to choose for herself.

For many women, rather than Mother's Day being joyful, it is a day of sorrow and heartache. The reasons vary. For some, the pain is about being unable to bear children (which often means they have had miscarriages, like I have), or they have broken relationships with their mothers, or they feel like they have failed to be an adequate mother to the children that they have physically given birth to (and I can check that box also). Being a mom is complex!

Annette was one of my closest friends in high school. She was one of the few folks from school that I stayed in touch with after getting married. I was the matron of honor at Annette's wedding. A few months later she called me— so excited about being pregnant.

Annette and Matt heard a heartbeat at the 16 week ultrasound. The doctor told them they were good to go, no more testing necessary.

Baby Amelia died a few hours after being born. She had a functioning heart, but no other supporting organs; no liver, no kidneys, no stomach and no frontal lobes in her brain. Amelia passed the test for being a person as far as our about to be current "heartbeat bills" go, but she was never a viable life.

Amelia was carried to term. It was a difficult delivery, and Annette was rendered unable to carry future pregnancies to term. Annette has never gotten over the sorrow connected to motherhood. Being a mom is complex! Not being able to be a mom is complex!

Sometimes I have the honor of sharing words that others may not be able to give voice to. This is such a day. I pray you will love those around you deeply. Appreciate what awesome folks they are, and tell them!

Blessings, Reverend Ruth
Amen

Trinity's Windows

The trustees have received a $10,000 grant from the Idaho Heritage Trusts to help with the restoration of two more vent windows along the north aisle of the sanctuary. This is about one-third of the cost of the project. The project includes $13,000 for window restoration, $14,000 for three crates of custom glass, $1,000 for shipping and $3,000 for a contingency. We have received contributions from church members to help kick-start our fund raising and have identified other possible sources of funding, but still need the support of Trinity members and friends to make this project a reality.

As part of the planning process, a detailed condition report was prepared for both of the vent windows. We want to share a summary of the condition report in the newsletter so you will know why the windows need to be restored. The steel sashes of the two vent windows are stamped with identifying numbers 17 and 19. Since the condition of both vent windows is similar, only the details of Sash 17 will be discussed in this article. A copy of the complete condition report can be requested from the church secretary or Richard Dickson.

A sketch of Sash 17 was prepared to document the visible cracks in individual panes of glass and identify the panels that have been replaced with mismatched glass.

The vent window has a total of 45 individual rectangular panes of glass. In Sash 17, eight panes have been replaced and eleven other panes have visible cracks. Silicone caulk has been smeared over some of the cracks to try to stabilize them. The silicone caulk will need to be removed during restoration.

The small panes along the border (Panels 1, 14, 15, 25, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45 & 46) are called fillets. The fillets are almost entirely obscured by the angle iron of the sash, but based on past experience additional cracking is likely. In 1978, the windows were installed using silicon caulk, rather than glazing cement which probably contributed to the cracking of the fillets. Damage obscured by the sash may also be present in the top edges of some panes along the top row of the vent (i.e., panes 2 to 13).

Depending on the severity of the cracking, some of the larger panes of the window may be repaired by gluing the pieces together with museum-grade epoxy. As an example, the cracking in pane 4 is shown in the following photo.

If the cracks in a pane cannot be repaired, the pane will need to be replaced. The replacement glass will come from three crates of custom-made glass that will be procured as part of this project to match the primary colors of glass in our windows. After procuring the custom glass, we will have an adequate supply of replacement glass to use for future restoration projects.

Seven panes (2, 13, 16, 24, 33, 36 & 39) have been replaced with a green and purple glass that looks like the colors in a watermelon (See pane 2 in the previous photo). The replacement glass has a smooth finish that is quite different from the rough granite-catspaw finish of the original 1917 glass. The mismatched panes will be replaced with better matches from the three crates of custom glass. The streaky amber glass in pane 9 has been replaced with glass that is a relatively good match to the original. During the restoration, a decision will be made to either keep this pane or replace it with new custom-made glass.

No failed lead came was observed, however the stained glass in Sash 17 has a noticeable convex bow across both the length and width of the window. The sagging is probably caused by the downward pull of gravity when the vent window is open. During restoration, steel support bars will be installed to prevent future sagging.

We all admire and appreciate the beauty of our Trinity's stained glass windows. They represent a legacy from our past, and we need to be good stewards of this treasure. Now is the time to continue restoring the windows to their original beauty. The trustees will need the support of Trinity members and friends to raise the required funds to proceed with the restoration project.

Donations can be made to the Stained Glass Repair fund at Trinity. If you would like additional information, please contact Richard Dickson, Jo Ann Rose, Nancy Stuart or the church office.
